PERILS OF THE PENDLETON ESCORT. —Pending the really earnest and serious work of the cally earnest and serious work of the cally earnest and serious work of the period affe very element and generally very amusing. The Pendleton escort, who came to New York with big words and much assumption of influence, and who met a fatal disappointment, is the butt of innumerable jokes. According to the Cincinnati Times the members of the escort arrived home there in a very dilapidated condition. It says:

Show York with clean linen dusters, bran new hats, silver badges, and bright little flags with greenbacks 'onto' them, and who entergreenbacks 'onto' them, and who entered the Empire city in a solid phalanx, with muste and much banners. They have been dropping in by twos and threes for a week or more. Badges and thags had disappeared; they had exchanged their hats or bought others—one man had his colored—and the linen dusters needed washing badly. They are all home now, with the exception of three or four. As they are known to have pawned their railroad tickets' and to be out or money, it is supposed that to be out of money, it is supposed that they are endeavoring to make their way home again on foot. Owing to the heat of the weather, and their enfecbled condition from want of food, they are not able to make over five or six miles a day. Which we will sell low for eash. We have the With the cooler weather of autumn they will probably make better time, and reach home by the time that winter sets in. They are reported as wearing linen dusters, worn away as far up as the middle of the back, and the rims of their Pendleton hats are entirely gone. Their Clothing is New and Desirable, consisting of shoes are worn out and their feet bound up in rags. Some relief should be sent to them at once." One of of the sufferers has written a letter to a sympathizer in Cincinnati, in which he says: "We are moving slowly but steadily on Cincinnati," where "we expect to arrive before the holidays, but cannot tell." He continues:

We would get along faster if it wasn't for the tunnels. We are afraid to walk through them-afraid some thundering train would knock us to thunder-so we have to climb the mountain. The brambles have worn our coat tails all

This morning we (John and I) took a vote to see how we stood on the polititical question. The vote stood as fol-

In favor of Blemour and Sair, In favor of drink, In favor of square meal,

In favor of reaching Cincinnati as soon as possible,

The letter concludes in the following melancholy strain:

"We are nearly in dispair. John thinks we are destined to perish here, and is driving a stake into the ground (the only stake he has been able to raise), with his "Escort" hat on top of it, by which he hopes our remains will be identified by any party sent out in search of them. Here we shall rest until morning, when, if able, we shall continue our journey. Our shoes are gone, and we would have gone after them had we not been so far gone. 'We are coming, George H.
